and Power Development Plan. The workshop enabled students who have qualified for the competition to collect their ideas for designing board games under the concept of energy sustainability in the next round.

Banpu has organized the BANPU B-Sports Thailand project for the third consecutive year. This year, the Company aims to enhance the knowledge and understanding towards "energy sustainability" topic for young generation. Therefore, the Company has organized a board game design contest entitled "Energy on Board - designing energy sustainability through board game" to allow university students to realize the importance of energy as well as energy sustainability. Ten teams of students out of 28 participated teams who have qualified were allowed to join board game development and design workshops from Board Game Night or BGN, a cast board game online program attracting the biggest audience in Thailand, and learn more about energy sustainability from Banpu executives and employees before the final round happens in December 2020.
